

SELCA: Social Prescribing

Cancer has a wide-ranging impact on people's lives. The help people need to deal with some of these issues is often best provided in the community. Social Prescribing services can potentially provide invaluable support with the practical problems and social issues that people face. We aim to open up the conversation about the best ways to support the development of this service across South East London.

This Community of Practice (CoP) offers a unique opportunity for passionate people to explore and reflect on the current landscape of Social Prescribing. This will help us to learn with and from others, and to share our related practice and experience in order to consider approaches to improve our patient's access and experience of Social Prescribing and the quality of life benefits it offers.

A great opportunity to link Social prescribing and cancer services and to make improvements in how these services work together.
